ELISE REMENDER

Elise Remender's artistic journey began at an early age in her hometown of Phoenix, Arizona. Her love for visual storytelling led her to pursue a degree in illustration and animation at the esteemed Academy of Art University in San Francisco, California. Fueled by her fascination with the arid climate of her native land, Remender embarked on a creative odyssey to conjure up images that would capture the essence of the verdant nature that seemed to elude her.

Remender's inspiration was sparked by the shimmering pools that seemed to adorn every household in Arizona. She was enamored by the interplay between the aquamarine hue of the water and the way the light danced off its surface, casting enchanting reflections that were nothing short of magical.

Influenced by the alluring aesthetics of Gil Elvgren and Alberto Vargas, Remender's work reflects a unique fusion of the opulent pin-up style and the color palette and stylization of Mid-Century fashion and photography. With a profound yearning to revive the elegance and beauty of a bygone era, Remender immerses herself in the glamour and sophistication of Old Hollywood.

Her latest collection, the Bathing Beauties series, is a testament to her artistic ingenuity. By exploring the human form and abstracting it through the manipulation of light and reflection, Remender seeks to recreate the vintage elegance and historical charm of Southeast Asia's iconic hotel pools and gardens. Her work transports us to a time when Ernest Hemingway and Jackie Kennedy Onassis graced these exquisite locations with their presence, evoking a sense of nostalgia and wonder that is truly unparalleled.

Remender's work has appeared in galleries in the US and Asia, and in GQ Magazine, Architectural Digest, Dwell, California Home, People, and many other publications. Her paintings hang in luxury properties including The Ritz Carlton San Francisco, The Hard Rock Hotel Las Vegas, and Hilton properties across the United States, as well as in the homes of celebrity collectors including Ryan Seacrest and Kylie Jenner.
