

NICOLA KATSIKIS

Born and raised in Atlanta, Georgia, Nicola Katsikis moved to Los Angeles where she embraces art as a lifestyle, surrounding herself with artists. Katsikis explores new ideas by experimenting with new materials and techniques and drawing upon her extensive background in design and color. In the studio, nothing matters but the creation unfolding in front of her. The results feel serendipitous, unforeseen, and opportune.

Katsikis was intrigued by graffiti from a young age, observing subway cars with colorful images. The artist states, "I've always used the urban landscape as my inspiration, finding beauty where others may see grime. Graffiti is a natural expression of people's feelings and emotions."

Katsikis's artworks are creative combinations of her own photographs. Each photograph adds color as well as depth to the artwork, revealing the materials the graffiti was painted on originally, or showing aspects of well-known places that have been previously overlooked. All of her work is applied to a wood panel and finished off with several coats of clear resin.
